Important Information from the Landlord and Tenant Board

The termination date

The termination date is different depending on your landlord's reason for giving you this notice and whether this is your first or second Notice to End your Tenancy in the past 6 months.

For Reason 1, the termination date the landlord sets out in this notice must be at least 10 days after the landlord gives you this notice.

For Reasons 2 and 3,

- If this is your first Notice to End your Tenancy in the past 6 months, the termination date must be at least 20 days after the landlord gave you this notice.
- If this is your second Notice to End your Tenancy in the past 6 months and the first notice had a 7 day correction period, the termination date must be at least 14 days after the landlord gives you this notice.

What if you disagree with the notice?

You do not have to move out if you disagree with what the landlord has put in this notice. However, the landlord can apply to the Board for an order to evict you. The Board will schedule a hearing where you can explain why you disagree.

What if you move out?

If you move out of the rental unit by the termination date, your tenancy ends on that date. However, if your landlord gave you this notice because you misrepresented your income or the income of family members living in the rental unit, you may still owe the landlord money for the amount you would have been required to pay if you had not misrepresented your income.

What if the landlord applies to the Board?

If the landlord applies to the Board to evict you, the Board will schedule a hearing and send you a copy of the application and the Notice of Hearing. The Notice of Hearing sets out the date, time and location of the hearing. At the hearing, the landlord will have to prove the claims they made in this Notice to End your Tenancy and in the application and you can respond to the claims your landlord makes.
